4,000-Ton British Ship Lost

DRIVEN ASHORE BY CYCLONE

Calcutta, Nov. 20. The 4,251 ton British steamship Skeldergate has been abandoned on the Orissa coast about 200 miles South-west of Calcutta. She was driven ashore during a weekend cyclone.

Her Captain, J. Mills, radioed today that the ship's back is broken, but the crew are safe. The Skeldergate, owned by the Redgate Steamship Company, and registered at London, was carrying Australian wheat to India.

Captain C. A. Ryan, of the American steamship Steel Director, said here today he first heard the Skeldergate's distress signal at noon on Saturday. He reached her vicinity the same night and located her after a four hours search.

Twenty-two of the 33 crew had then reached shore by the ship's boats but the boats could not return through heavy seas, he said.

Although rough seas prevented the Steel Director from taking off the Skeldergate's remaining crew, Captain Ryan stood by until Sunday morning, when he learned that a Calcutta tug had been sent out.—Associated Press.

Valuable Goods For Red China

Washington, November 20. Senate investigators said tonight that millions of pounds of tin plates and steel sheets have been shipped from American ports to Communist China, and demanded that the Commerce Department halt the traffic.

Senator Herbert O'Connor said that steel and tin were classified in the United States as second and rejects but that they were "easily" be turned into weapons.

Senator O'Connor, acting chairman of the Senate Sub-committee investigating exports to Red China, said he telegraphed the Commerce Department's Office of International Trade to ask that the materials be placed on the Department's "positive"—or controlled—list of exports.

He asked also for an immediate "review" of the Department's policy in letting the materials be exported without permits. He said that "spot checks" taken at American ports show that millions of pounds of tin and steel have been shipped out of the United States.—United Press.

COMMENT OF THE DAY

Money For The Civic Centre

It is evident from newspaper reactions to the recent disclosure that Government has earmarked a site for a civic centre that principal fear is the Authorities will be niggardly both in the area they are prepared to allocate for the buildings and also in the size of the centre. Government may feel it is too early to offer any reassurances on these two points inasmuch that there is no chance of a civic centre being constructed until the Praya reclamation work has been completed—two years' time at the earliest. But we feel an official public statement at this time would achieve much. Government must have some idea as to what area will be needed for a city hall that will be a credit to the Colony, and also some notion about its size and uses. In making these known at this time Government would not commit itself to any particular design, but it can satisfy the public that when a civic centre does become a reality it will be something worth while. There is too, the question of financing the cost of construction. Government has said that it cannot discuss that at the present because the amount to be spent must depend on general budgeting. This attitude may be convenient for Government but it is not an impressive argument. Surely some reasonably accurate estimate can be made as to cost. Is it likely to require $10 million, $15 million or $20 million? If it is going to be a genuine civic centre with amenities such as a public library, museum, theatre, council chamber and so forth, it is not likely to cost less than $10 million. Will probably require something in the region of $20 million. The point is, could not funds be earmarked at the close of the current financial year for this project? And by earmarked, we mean actually set aside. In this connection our thoughts turn automatically to the General Revenue Surplus. Government's target is to build up a balance that will be equal to one year's revenue. The target will not only be reached this year, but is almost certain to be surpassed by anything up to $40 million. That is if the actual revenue for 1949-50 or the estimated revenue for 1950-51 is regarded by Government as the yardstick for a satisfactory surplus. If such be the case surplus funds will immediately become available for distribution and we see no reason why at least $10 million should not be transferred to a special reserve fund to be used in due course for building our civic centre. It will possibly be argued that the Colony has other urgent commitments for which ready cash will be necessary, but this has long been an accepted escape clause to avoid long-term commitments. Provision of a new city hall has been an urgent matter since 1938, but Government has always managed to sidestep the issue. Nevertheless it remains for the public a question of urgency and financial provisions for its fulfillment should come into the same category. The old excuse that Hongkong cannot afford the luxury of a civic centre is no longer tenable. Surplus revenue figures disprove it. We suggest one of the happiest decisions Government can announce next April is the allocation of substantial funds for the eventual construction of a new city hall.

UN TROOPS ON THE MANCHURIAN FRONTIER

US Embassy Official Held Up By Robbers

Manila, Nov. 21. The National Bureau of Investigation, Constabulary and police, seeking the bandit killers of a rich American businessman, John Herber, had another case on their hands today with the report that an American Embassy official and a woman companion were held up and robbed in the same district by outlaws believed to be part of the same gang.

A press report said that Mr. Thomas Wright, First Secretary and Consul in the United States Embassy here, and a woman companion were held up on Tagaytay national highway, about 30 miles south of Manila, last Sunday, half an hour before the bandits waylaid Mr. Herber and three friends, killing him and wounding a Russian businessman of Manila, Mr. Alexander Krivenko.

Asked to comment on the report today, Mr. Wright told the United Press, "I have no statement to make at this time." However, he said he would confer with the United States Charge d'Affaires, Mr. Vinton Chapin, this morning and indicated that there might be a statement later.

The provincial authorities, led by Governor Dominador Camerino, were doing their utmost to round up a bandit gang which was believed to number 10 men.

NBI agents were reported to be working on a theory that Huk dissidents had a hand in the slaying of Mr. Herber.—United Press.

The arrest of two men attempting to smuggle 150 pounds of gold valued at $250,000 out of the United States was revealed today by United States attorney F. Parker. He identified the men as M. Fleigerl, 25, of New York and Charles Manning, 28, of Sydney, Australia.

They were arrested on Friday night as they boarded a CAT World Airlines plane for Bombay at La Guardia airport here. They were arraigned on charges of conspiracy to violate an ordinance of 1934.

Parker said that Fleigerl and Manning were members of a ring which had smuggled some $37,000,000 worth of gold out of the United States in past years. He said Manning had 70 pounds of sheet gold concealed in the lining of his suitcases, and Fleigerl hid the gold in his shoes and in the money belt he wore and concealed 51 pounds of sheet gold in the lining of his three suitcases.

The federal attorney estimated that the gold could have been sold in Bombay at about $80 an ounce as against $35 an ounce here.—United Press.

U.S. May Make Super Atomic Bomb From New Gas

Washington, Nov. 20. In a matter of weeks the United States will reach the ground-breaking stage of a multi-million dollar project to find out whether it can make super atomic bombs out of a gas called tritium. Science says that the so-called hydrogen bomb is a sure thing—theoretically.

The Atomic Energy Commission put it this way: somewhere between the possible and probable. It lies to Dupont de Nemours & Company to determine just where the truth lies. The company, which built the atom bomb works during World War II, has contracted to construct a similarly huge plant for manufacturing H-bomb explosive.

Dupont, the Atomic Energy Commission and other agencies have been hunting for a suitable salt for the new works since early August. They surveyed scores of offered locations, but found few that met the specifications. Now, they are nearing a decision. It is understood. Once the site is picked, Dupont will send a construction team in and the big job will get under way. Because of what Dupont learned about building atomic furnaces during the war it is believed that engineers will top a few months off the 17 months needed to build the Hanford Washington plant.

ATOMIC REACTORS

The H-Bomb plant will consist of atomic reactors, like those at Hanford. But instead of making the atom bomb explosive Plutonium, it will change ordinary substances like metal by atomic bombardment into tritium.

Tritium is H-3, a "heavy" form of the nature's lightest element. Science says it can be made to explode. Get enough of it together, set it off and theoretically you could blow up a huge city.

Engineers do not expect the first H-bomb, if it can be made, to be that tough. Instead of 1,000 times more powerful than the atom bomb as some estimates go, practical atomic ordnance people doubt if the model will be more than two to 10 times as tough as the plutonium weapon.

Picking the site for H-bomb works has been a hard task. Because of the requirements. The big factor is military considerations. Including vulnerability to attack. The site must be near enough a "population centre" to provide homes for the workers. Water availability and public safety also must be considered. In one sense it would not make much difference if it were found that the H-bomb is impossible. The new plant could be quickly switched to the manufacture of atom-bomb explosives. But as one official said, "Either way, the world being in the shape it is, we have to find out."

He Repented At Leisure

Adelaide, Nov. 20. A thief who took a £120 worth of equipment from a yacht in Outer Harbour, returned it and enclosed a £2 to cover cost of moving the equipment back to the yacht.

He telephoned the owner, Mr. R. T. Pavilla, and told him to collect the equipment from his front gate. The chief waited for confirmation that the property had been recovered and then apologized.

With the £2 was a note reading, "I am disgusted at my action. It is not a pleasant feeling to be a thief."—Reuter.

The Entire Line Now Advancing Warily MACARTHUR PUZZLED BY LACK OF OPPOSITION

FROM LIONEL CRANE

Tokyo, Nov. 20. The first Americans to reach the Manchurian border stormed into the outskirts of the town of Hyosanjin on the Yalu River tonight.

The only other United Nations troops to reach the border were a battalion of South Koreans who spent a few hours at Chosan, 200 miles, southwest, and then hastily retreated when the first Chinese attack began at the end of October.

Elements of the 7th Division reached the border tonight after meeting only light resistance. The whole United Nations line is now going towards the border again but they are making a very cautious advance. Senior officers are puzzled by the enemy retreat. When the Chinese entered the war they surrounded one American regiment and disrupted two South Korean corps and at that time there was real fear they might break through on the northwest of the front even as far as Pyongyang. Then suddenly they stopped fighting. For the past ten days they have been retreating.

They seem to be making no real effort to impede United Nations' troops on their way back to the border and General MacArthur's spokesman said tonight, "Frankly we do not know what their game is—we wish we did."

Despite the lack of resistance the Allies are taking no chances this time. The Chinese attack caught them with long overextended lines, but now they are going forward on a solid substantial front.

One senior officer said, "We are not going to get our fingers burned again."

One theory for the strange Communist retreat is that they are short of food. Chinese prisoners have said they crossed the Manchurian border carrying only ten days' supply of bread and millet.

When this had gone they stole corn from the North Koreans. It is known that the bitter weather and mountainous country have been greater hardships for the enemy than for the Americans who have been supplied with rations and fuel from the air.

If the Reds do not land a sudden Sunday punch it is expected that other British and American units will also reach the border in the next few days.

Meanwhile the order is "Go forward but go warily."—London Express Service.

IN OTHER SECTORS

Seoul, Nov. 21.

South Korean troops advanced six miles in the north-east and up to three miles in the north-west. US Marines plodded warily along both the eastern and western rims of Changlin Reservoir, an important link in Korean and Manchurian hydro-electric power networks. The Fifth and Seventh Regiments made no contact with the Reds yesterday, a 10th Corps spokesman said.

In the six Navy Panther jets fought a six mile high battle with seven to nine Russian built jets, the Navy reported in Washington. The Communist planes were quickly put to flight across the Manchurian border, with two of them trailing smoke.

The 10th Corps spokesman said the Seventh Division had encountered only North Korean soldiers in its drive to the border.

The Division's arrival at the border is expected to give a big psychological boost to U.S. troops after the disappointing pullback of early November on the north-west front. The appearance of Chinese Communists in the fighting then brought an abrupt halt to the American drive which had pushed within 14 air miles of the border at the closest point.

The Chinese Communist radio at Peking claimed that Korean Red troops with the assistance of Chinese "volunteers" had inflicted 1,500 casualties on South Korean and American troops between November 9-10. The Red broadcast claimed 48 Americans had been killed or wounded and 45 more taken prisoner.

There was no substantiation of this report from United Nations sources. Instead, General Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters in Tokyo announced that the Republic of Korea Capital Division in the past few days of fighting had killed 1,703 Reds, and captured 1,003.

LAST IMPORTANT POINT

The Capital Division, strongly supported by US fighter bombers and the cruiser St. Paul offshore, advanced four miles yesterday to a point about 25 air miles south-west of Chongjin. This is the last port of consequence in Communist control short of the Siberian frontier.

Further south on the north-east front the ROK Third Division clashed with a pocket of Communists near Ilksu, 22 miles south-east of Chongjin Reservoir. About 45 Reds were killed.

On the North-west front, US First Cavalry and 24th Division patrols ranged Westward of the Chongchon River front without meeting more than small groups of Reds.

The most notable advance in this sector was made by the ROK Second Corps, composed of the ROK Sixth, Seventh, and Eight Divisions. These troops advanced up to three miles and moved abreast of the US First Cavalry, which is on their west flank.

The Eighth ROK Division advanced three miles while the ROK Sixth Division moved forward one and a half miles. Only two companies of Reds were estimated to be east of the ROK anchor position at Tokchon.—Associated Press.

EGYPT DEMAND REJECTED BY BEVIN

No Intention Of Withdrawing Troops From Canal Zone Britain Resting On Treaty

London, Nov. 20.

The Foreign Secretary, Mr Ernest Bevin, answered King Farouk's demand for the withdrawal of British troops from Egypt today by declaring that Britain had no intention of leaving the Middle East defenceless.

He indicated in the House of Commons that the British policy on Egypt would not be changed by the demands made in King Farouk's speech from the Throne to the Egyptian Parliament last Friday.

He said that Britain's attitude remained the same towards the Sudan, which King Farouk insisted should be reunited with Egypt under his Crown. "The Sudanese must decide their own future," Mr Bevin said.

Mr Bevin added that he did not despair of being able to reconcile the conflicting British and Egyptian views at his forthcoming talks in London with Sudan El Din Bey, the Egyptian Foreign Minister.

The Foreign Secretary said that the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty, contained no provision for modification or revision except by mutual consent.

He told the House that Britain had been willing to discuss the possibility of revising with the Egyptian Government and there had been discussions this summer between the British Ambassador and the Egyptian Government.

King Farouk announced last Friday that Egypt demanded the immediate evacuation of British troops from the Canal Zone and the complete unification of the Sudan under the Egyptian Crown.

SPIRIT OF FRIENDSHIP
"It has always been the desire of the British Government to settle outstanding differences with Egypt in a spirit of friendship between the two countries on a basis of equality and with full respect for the independence and sovereignty of Egypt," he declared.

The two Governments had been in contact for many months on defence matters with the object of removing misunderstanding and difficulties in that spirit, he said.

In these discussions no difficulties in principle had arisen over the defence of the Middle East in time of war.

For this reason and in view of Britain's obligation under the treaty, British Government had continued in the training and equipment of their troops.

Mr Bevin said that for the British Government to deny assistance to Egypt and certain other countries altogether would be "contrary to our treaty obligations."

The difficulties which had not yet been resolved did not concern action in the event of war but the question of defence measures in time of peace.

COMMON DEFENCE
The Egyptian Government had stated that they wished British forces to be withdrawn from the Canal Zone in time of peace, he declared.

Mr Bevin maintained that the principle of common defence measures in time of peace had been accepted by all the Western Powers and was "fully compatible with national independence and sovereignty."

Other countries in the Middle East were co-operating in that way.

"This is not a matter which merely concerns the United Kingdom and Egypt," Mr Bevin declared.

"What is at stake is the safety and independence of other countries also."

Amid cheers he added: "I can assure them as I assure the House of Commons that the Government have no intention of taking any step on agreeing to any measures which would leave the Middle East defenceless."

The Sudan had been the scene of great progress in the political, social and economic fields during recent years. It would be tragic if anything were to disturb this.

Mr Bevin said that the Government's attitude remained the same—that the Sudanese should, in due course, freely decide their own future.

NOT DESPAIRING
Mr Bevin said that despite the difficulties he did not despair of being able to reconcile Britain's position with Egypt on a friendly and just basis, which would take account of the factors he had mentioned.

Egypt's Foreign Minister would be visiting London next week and this, he understood, would give him an opportunity to talk the matter over further.

Mr Anthony Eden, deputy Conservative leader, asked whether the British Government's position was that it rested on the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty of 1936.

Mr Bevin replied: "We should not move except by mutual action of the two Governments. We rest on the Treaty until it is changed by mutual consent."

Mr Clement Davies, the Liberal leader, asked if the Government considered the maintenance and protection of the Suez Canal as a highway for international trade was a matter concerning the nations east and west of the Canal.

If so, had it been made perfectly clear to the Egyptian Government?

Mr Bevin replied: "I think our position has been perfectly clear ever since the 1936 Treaty was made. It is clearly understood on both sides."

A Labour Member, Mr Julian Snow, asked for an assurance that the Sudanese would "not be left to the tender mercies of Cairo."

Mr Bevin replied: "The Sudanese have made a remarkable development and there is an example to the world of what can be done in territories and by peoples of that kind."

"We shall do nothing at all to set that work back or leave it to the tender mercies of other people."

SOLUTION POSSIBLE
Another Labour Member, Mr Harold Davies, suggested that some international organisation might be set up under the

Big Advance To Agreement

Paris, Nov. 20.
France and America are nearing agreement on rearmament, it was stated at the French Foreign Office today.

The experts of the Military Committee of the Atlantic Council, it was stated, have now agreed that the size of the German military unit to be integrated in the European army shall be a combat team, instead of the "division" originally mentioned in the American proposal.—Reuter.

United Nations to deal with the problem.

Mr Bevin retorted: "I do not think there is any need to establish anything else. I think it is quite possible, if handled correctly, that we shall arrive at a solution of this problem."

Replying to a suggestion that Britain should stop further releases of sterling balances to Egypt, Mr Bevin warned Members to be a little more careful.

"I think I would leave it where it is and let the negotiations go on," he said.

Asked whether Britain should stop supplying Egypt with arms, including Centurion tanks, Mr Bevin said he would leave that to the Minister of Defence to answer.

Mr Bevin said that Britain entered into a contract for tanks and Egypt paid for them. He did not like breaking contracts easily and Britain had decided to supply those which had been paid for.

Mr Eden said that Article 16 of the Treaty specifically laid down that a new Treaty should be on the basis of certain articles of the 1936 Treaty Alliance for mutual defence.

OBLIGATION

This was agreed to by "every single political party in Egypt." Was that not an obligation which no Government could unilaterally renounce? he asked.

Mr Bevin: "That is the view we have taken all through."

Mr Somerset de Chair, Conservative, said that the 1936 Treaty, which bore the personal signature of the present Egyptian Prime Minister (Nasir Fawzi), provided specifically that the presence of British troops in the Canal Zone should not constitute in any way an occupation and would not prejudice the sovereign rights of Egypt. It was now perfectly clear that the Egyptians had now decided to drag the Treaty into the limelight of publicity to "mask severe discomfort."

Was it not a fact that if it were not for the British Army, German and Italian troops would now be in total occupation of the whole of Egypt?

Mr Bevin said that whatever the motives of a particular country might be he did not think it wise to call them into question in international affairs.

"I have to negotiate with these people," he declared.

Brigadier Low, Conservative, asked for an assurance that the Egyptian statement of policy would not upset the plan to build reasonable accommodation for British troops in the Canal Zone.

Mr Bevin: "We will look after the accommodation."

Mr Nigel Fisher, Conservative, asked: "If the Egyptian Government persist in their dictatorial attitude, will you consider stopping all further releases of sterling balances to Egypt?"

Mr Bevin replied: "Really, I ask Members of this House to be more careful in their choice of language. Egypt has not acted dictatorially. This House sometimes puts up propositions whose wisdom other people question. I think I should leave the matter where it is and let the negotiations go on."

—Reuter.

CAN IRON OUT

Washington, Nov. 20.
A State Department spokesman said the Department hopes Egypt and Britain can iron out their differences in a "mutually satisfactory" manner.

The State Department, however, is making no representations to either government holding the dispute "is one to be worked out by Egypt and Britain."

West German Social Democratic Party Hail Big Victories

Frankfurt, Nov. 20.

The West German Social Democratic Party today hailed its big victories in the Hesse and Wuertemberg-Baden Parliamentary elections yesterday as important evidence of public backing for its "temporary non-agreement to rearmament."

Dr Kurt Schumacher, the Party leader, told Reuter in Munich that the electors of these two American Zone states had moved to the left because of the attitude of the West German Federal Chancellor, Dr Konrad Adenauer's, right-wing Coalition Government over the rearmament issue.

More than three-quarters of all Germans would refuse military service as long as the West German Government held to its present policy in support of a West German military contribution to the West European defence.

Dr Schumacher has repeatedly insisted that the Western Powers must have adequate deterrent forces in Germany to give "proof" that they would not leave Germany in the event of a Russian invasion.

He wants nation-wide elections before the West German Parliament takes a decision on the rearmament issue.

In Bonn, official sources said that it would be wrong to conclude from yesterday's elections that the German people did not favour a contribution to Western defence.

A feature of the election was the eclipse of the Communists, who will now have no seats in either the Hesse or Wuertemberg-Baden Parliaments. They failed to get five per cent of the votes necessary to elect deputies from the proportional representation lists.

The latest official figures in the elections were:

Hesse: (Figures in brackets show seats in the old Parliament.)
Social Democrats 820,444—47 (38) seats.
Christian Democrats 347,803 votes—12 (23) seats.
Free Democrats 588,191 votes—21 (14) seats.
Communists 76,440 votes—no (10) seats.

Wuertemberg-Baden:
Social Democrats 476,872 votes—35 (85) seats.
Christian Democrats 379,181 votes—31 (39) seats.
Free Democrats 303,331 votes—31 (19) seats.
Communists 70,207 votes—no (10) seats.

Lhasa Not In Red Hands

London, Nov. 20.

The Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Mr Ernest Davies, said today that reports that Lhasa, the capital of Tibet, had fallen to the Chinese Communist Army and that peace negotiations were in progress were "quite without foundation."

He told the House of Commons that Britain had been informed by the Government of India that their agent in Lhasa reported that the invasion had made less progress than was at first believed.—Reuter.

He wants nation-wide elections before the West German Parliament takes a decision on the rearmament issue.

In Bonn, official sources said that it would be wrong to conclude from yesterday's elections that the German people did not favour a contribution to Western defence.

A feature of the election was the eclipse of the Communists, who will now have no seats in either the Hesse or Wuertemberg-Baden Parliaments. They failed to get five per cent of the votes necessary to elect deputies from the proportional representation lists.

The latest official figures in the elections were:

Hesse: (Figures in brackets show seats in the old Parliament.)
Social Democrats 820,444—47 (38) seats.
Christian Democrats 347,803 votes—12 (23) seats.
Free Democrats 588,191 votes—21 (14) seats.
Communists 76,440 votes—no (10) seats.

Wuertemberg-Baden:
Social Democrats 476,872 votes—35 (85) seats.
Christian Democrats 379,181 votes—31 (39) seats.
Free Democrats 303,331 votes—31 (19) seats.
Communists 70,207 votes—no (10) seats.

Refugees and Nationalists 211,590—15 (no) seats.—Reuter.

DRAMATIC MEETING

Laurels For Men Of M'sex

North-West Korean front, Nov. 19.

Two Middlesex soldiers won the praise of the Americans for the efficient manner in which they administered first aid today when a Korean truck crashed near Pakchon, killing four and injuring 11 Korean occupants.

They are Private Fred Cheesman, of Croydon, Surrey, and Private Douglas Francis, also of Croydon.

The occupants of the truck were smothering in the mud of a paddyfield, pinned under the capsized vehicle when American and British soldiers rushed to their rescue.

The accident occurred when the howitzer it was towing slipped off the road and slipped the truck on its back.

Corporal Talbot Ward, aided by Francis, helped to lift the truck and free the injured South Korean occupants.

Private Cheesman moved among the injured, giving first aid.

"He was marvellous. He certainly knew what he was doing," said one American. Cheesman administered morphine to an injured woman, Miss Kim Sok, who was travelling in the truck.

Miss Kim, a nurse, had both legs broken and suffered a possible hip fracture. "All I could think of when I was smothering in the mud was whether I would see the end of the war," said Miss Kim through an interpreter.

Allied soldiers helped to evacuate the injured on improvised stretchers.—Reuter.

London, Nov. 20.
Britain, the Argentine, and Chile have agreed to extend their agreement restricting the movement of warships in the Antarctic to avoid "friction" in the area.

Today's announcement by the Foreign Office in London, said that it had been agreed that no naval vessels would be sent south of latitude 60 degrees except on customary naval movements.—Reuter.

Does Not Want Communist China In United Nations

Flushing, Nov. 20.

Britain made the charge today that Russia, despite her protestations about Peking's exclusion, actually does not want Communist China represented in the United Nations.

BORDER BREACH ALLEGED

Tel-Aviv, Nov. 20. Israel has lodged a complaint against Egypt with the Mixed Armistice Commission against an alleged crossing of the Israel boundary by Arab tribesmen, less than 24 hours after the Security Council's resolution for the control of such movements, an Israeli Army spokesman said tonight.

Accusing Egypt of encouraging such infiltration, the spokesman said, "Within 24 hours of the Security Council's resolution outlining steps necessary to control the movement of nomadic Arabs across international frontiers or armistice lines, the Egyptians have encouraged Azamee tribesmen to cross the frontier and infiltrate into Israel in the vicinity of El Aujia."

ALBANIAN CHARGE

Berlin, Nov. 20. The official Albanian news agency charged Yugoslavia today with "violating the Albanian border seven times between November 7 and 12," the East German news agency, ADN, reported tonight.

ADN said that in six of these cases Yugoslav forces crossed Albanian territory. It gave no further details.—Reuter.

Vietminh Arms Works Destroyed

Saigon, Nov. 20. French Union forces destroyed Vietminh camps and arms factories in a 10-day operation in Cochinchina, a French military spokesman said here today.

He said that the operation, which has now been concluded, was in the area south-west of Bienhoa and north-west of Baria.

French forces also destroyed several command posts, junks and sampans, the spokesman added.

In other operations in the Centre, Longxuyen and Mythe areas of Cochinchina, the Vietminh lost 69 killed and 40 prisoners, he said. Losses were reported on both sides when a convoy was ambushed by Vietminh forces near Tienyen, on the North-East Tonkin front. A slight increase of activity was reported from the Dinhlap area, also in the North-East.

Vietminh forces lost 50 killed and 80 prisoners in various Tonkin sectors, including Giam, Sontay and Dongtrieu, the spokesman said.

The British Minister of State, Mr. Kenneth Younger, speaking in the General Assembly, denounced the Soviet "peace" programme which endorses Mr. Trygve Lie's plan for periodic high-level meetings of the Security Council, but only on condition that Communist China be given the seat now held by the Chinese Nationalists.

Mr. Younger said: "It is typical of Soviet tactics that the issue should have been represented in this way, and it bears out the view long held by many governments which, like my own, have been anxious to see the Chinese People's Government at our council tables, that the Soviet Government does not share this desire of ours at all."

"On the contrary, it suits it very well to have the People's Government excluded from discussions here, and that this is her main reason for raising the issue of representation of the People's Government here in a form that is less likely to be accepted by member governments."

Mr. Younger's remarks constituted the first public acknowledgment by a major power of a belief that has been prevalent among United Nations circles for weeks—that Russia wanted to use the issue of Chinese representation for propaganda purposes but had no desire really to bring the Peking government into the world organization where it would have full contact with the West.—United Press.

GENERAL SUPPORT

Mr. Abba Eban (Israel) said that the influence of the United Nations in the peace plan, "as long as there were no normal relations with the Chinese Communist regime."

He stated that Israel supported Mr. Lie's peace plan. It constituted a programme, not a declaration, he maintained.

"The idea of a 20-year period during which the structure is laboriously built up may appear pessimistic to those who long for a swift and sudden cure," Mr. Eban said.

"Yet it embodies the sagacity of much realism and the patience of unexhausted faith."

M. Marcel Plaisant (France) announced his Government's general support for Mr. Lie's plan.

The French delegate opposed the Soviet six-point plan which is designed to replace Mr. Lie's suggestions.

M. Plaisant stressed that, contrary to Russian assertions, the Atlantic Pact was a purely defensive regional alliance.

"We are firm enemies of war," he stated.

The Assembly later endorsed Mr. Lie's plan for achieving peace through the United Nations. This was done after Mr. Lie had denied Russian charges that it was inspired by the American State Department.—Reuter.

Report Of Message By Nehru Denied

New Delhi, Nov. 20.

The Prime Minister, Pandit Nehru, today denied a report that Pandit Nehru had sent a message of greetings to the Communist-backed Warsaw Peace Congress.

The report, broadcast by France Radio, probably referred to a message sent by Uma Nehru, widow of a cousin of the Prime Minister. She said here today that she had been asked by the Congress sponsors for a message and she had replied to them saying: "India is a non-violent country and we believe in Mahatma Gandhi's principle of non-violence."—Reuter.

BRUTAL KOREAN SLAYINGS

Pakchon, Nov. 20.

The Australians, during Sunday's deep patrol into No-Mun's Land north-west of Pakchon, found evidence of the North Korean Army's ruthlessness against the civilian population.

One patrol found the bodies of two women shot through the head and two children beside them who had been battered to death.

The commander of a patrol, Captain Archer Denness, of Ryde, New South Wales, said: "There is no doubt that they were executed. The bodies were found in the woods and there is no evidence of an air-raid in the vicinity."

Civilians told the patrol that North Korean soldiers executed the two women and children either for the lack of support of the North Korean Army, which is living off the country, or for co-operation with the United Nations forces during their recent short-lived occupation of the area.

Another Australian patrol in the same area on Sunday found the bodies of three Korean males who had their hands tied behind their backs before execution.—Reuter.

Teeth Out Of Forget Britain Motion In Debate

Strasbourg, Nov. 20.

The important General Committee, during a day of hard debating in the European Parliament's modernistic white buildings here today, pulled the teeth out of a proposal to recommend immediate federation "with or without Britain" it was reliably learned tonight.

A proposal, put forward by Miss Mangla Klonm (Holland), the Committee's spokesman, called on those countries interested in federation to start right away by pooling defence in a European army and foreign affairs under a High Commission for Foreign Relations. The Committee refused to accept the High Commission proposal and agreed to postpone the defence question until tomorrow when Mr. Duncan Saldys, Mr. Winston Churchill's son-in-law, was to report on the work of the Sub-Committee on Defence.

The Committee adopted, instead, by the necessary two-thirds vote, a motion for submission to the full Assembly on Wednesday, which in the words of one member of the Committee, was a "very watered down motion" calling for the creation of "specialised authorities such as the Schuman Plan for a coal and steel plan."

After a short break at dinner time the Committee was to continue its work later tonight, discussing revision of the Council of Europe's statute.—Reuter.

No Commitments By Britain

London, Nov. 20.

Britain made no commitments on Indo-China at the recent meetings of the British, French and American Foreign Ministers in New York, the Foreign Under-Secretary, Mr. Ernest Davies, said today.

Mr. Woodrow Wyatt, Labour, had asked in the House of Commons whether the Government had any statement to make on the discussion on Indo-China in New York when the French Foreign Minister, Mr. Bidault, was present.

Mr. Davies said: "The Government has no statement to make on the discussion on Indo-China in New York when the French Foreign Minister, Mr. Bidault, was present."

Peace Congress Urged To Embrace "All Peace-Lovers"

Warsaw, Nov. 20.

Professor John Bernal, a British research scientist, urged the World Peace Congress here today to enlarge its campaign to embrace "all peace-lovers, however conservative their views."

"We have yet to learn how to understand and to deal not only with the arguments but also with the feelings, and often sincere feelings, of these 2,000 delegates of 71 nations."

"We must be ready to work together and to break down the barriers of political suspicion."

Insistence on a "broadening" of the anti-war campaign had been the keynote of this Congress. The conciliatory tone has already been put by such high Communist dignitaries as Professor Joliot-Curie, the French atomic scientist, and Signor Pietro Nenni, of Italy.

Professor Bernal accused the Atlantic nations of believing themselves "the born masters of the world" with rights over inferior peoples and particularly the United States for trying to impose a peace of their own choosing.

He proposed a resolution to "facilitate the greatest possible extension of the peace movement."

Charles Howard, a Negro of the American Progressive Party, had earlier attacked yesterday's speech by his party leader, Mr. John Rogge, as that of a "paid employee of the Yugoslav Government."

He declared that Rogge was a lawyer employed by the Yugoslav Embassy in Washington.

The delegates cheered for nine minutes today after a North Korean woman, Nam Pak Den, said that the Koreans would defend their country "to the last drop of blood."

"The flame of a holy war grows," she declared.

The Congress will end tomorrow evening with a grand concert.

Professor Joliot-Curie will make the closing address during the interval and the Congress resolutions will be read in eight languages.—Reuter.

Lawyer's Views

Warsaw, Nov. 20. Mr. Charles P. Howard, a Negro member of the Executive of the American Progressive Party, told the Warsaw Peace Congress today that yesterday's speech by his party leader, Mr. John Rogge, should be judged "in the light of his employment as lawyer for the Yugoslav Embassy in Washington."

Mr. Howard, a lawyer from Des Moines, Iowa, said that Mr. Rogge had not conveyed the views of the American delegation, as a lawyer for the Yugoslav Embassy, was a "paid employee of the Yugoslav Government."

"I think this Congress should evaluate his speech in the light of that employment," he said. "I am not going to argue with him about Tito. I will just say that he has become not only the lawyer for Tito but, at this late hour, he makes himself the advocate of the slave-holder, Jefferson Davies, and of King George III," he declared.

Mr. Howard said that the fight for peace was a fight to save the national future of the United States.

"We are against wars of aggression. We stand for peace, but we do not stand for the status quo."

"We Negro Americans want peace together with change. And we defend the individual rights of all peoples, including the American people and the Negro people, to alter their conditions of life by whatever means they find open to them."

"All my people look forward to the day when, in our own land, we will be treated with the human dignity and the love that has been accorded us in Czechoslovakia and Poland."—Reuter.

Search For Solution To Korea Imbroglia

London, Nov. 20.

The Foreign Office announced today that the British Government is consulting with the United States, French and the Commonwealth Governments about the possibility of finding a solution for the Korean problem.

The statement did not indicate what lines a solution might be looked for, but it was generally believed in diplomatic quarters here that it revolved in exchanges through diplomatic channels, on the feasibility of establishing a demilitarized zone in North Korea.

Others believed that the Western powers were inclined to support the Chinese Government would not consider such a proposal unless the demilitarized zone were under Chinese control.

tion during the past week with the United States, French and Commonwealth Governments regarding ways and means of finding a solution of the present difficulties in Korea. As consultations are still proceeding, it would not be appropriate to say more for the present.

Plans from Communist sources in New York last week indicated that the Chinese Government would not consider such a proposal unless the demilitarized zone were under Chinese control.

Hollywood is asleep, says Rene Clair

TWO haters of Hollywood were in London at a Dorchester Hotel cocktail party recently—51-year-old French film director Rene Clair and his attractive blonde wife.

Said M. Clair: "My answer to Hollywood is that I am back here. Hollywood is one big silence. It has been asleep for the past 18 years. It makes some good pictures. But it kills inspiration."

Said Mme. Clair: "I hated it. People there live in a little world of their own. The plumbing is magnificent, but you cannot live only with plumbing."

The Clairs spent six years in Hollywood—now plan to go to the South of France, where M. Clair expects to start work on a new comedy film.

Mme. Clair is glad it will be comedy. Her husband, she said, is happier with comedy. He is happier still when writing. "That is when he starts hammering something. He mends everything" widdish in the house. Then he suddenly dashes upstairs to his office to write for a while."

Wooden Horse Club

While a prisoner of war in Chiati, Italy, in 1942, Major George Gordon thought it would be a good idea to form a club in London for ex-POW. Recently his idea became reality, when in Hurlford Street, Mayfair, the Wooden Horse Club was opened.

So keen was the Gordon Highlanders major during those days behind barbed wire that the names of the club's potential members were jotted down on old cigarette packets, the backs of matchboxes and odd scraps of paper. Many of those names were at the 200-strong opening party, including Captain Philip John Gardner, London's first V.C. of the last war, who won his award for rescuing an officer from a tank under fire in Libya. There is one piece of "barbed wire" in the new club. Made of rubber, it surrounds a mural painting of a humorous escape scene at Stalag Luft III.

Gen Romulo On Asia's Present Economic Vacuum

New York, Nov. 20.

Asia's main problem is economic security but the rest of the free world is endeavouring to fill the existing economic vacuum in Asia on a basis of equality and with due respect for the freedom of Asian states, said General Carlos P. Romulo, the Philippines Secretary of Foreign Affairs and chief of the Philippine United Nations delegation, addressing the 65th annual banquet of the Ohio Society of New York at Hotel Statlers.

He said: "The basic problem of Asia... is freedom from want. Freedom from foreign rule is still an acute problem in some countries in Asia but some countries in the classic sense have been largely liquidated and in the few remaining places where it still holds sway it is bound to be uprooted and swept away in due time."

"The main problem, therefore, is economic security of Asian nations. Economic security lies at the root of widespread unrest and revolutionary upheavals in many parts of Asia today. Asia frequently has been presented to the West as a power vacuum. It is a correct appraisal within certain limits. But the absence of power is only one of the aspects of the Asian situation. What has often been ignored, or not sufficiently appreciated, is the fact that Asia is also an economic vacuum. There can be no doubt whatever as to the choice of the free states of Asia. They have repeatedly avowed their desire for equal partnership with the rest of the free world."

MOST HOPEFUL

He said: "One of the most hopeful developments in international affairs today is the effort of the rest of the free world, led by the United States of America, to fill the economic vacuum in Asia... on a basis of equality and with due respect for the freedom of the new Asian states."

Referring to President Truman's recent United Nations Day speech, in which he outlined the achievements for human advances which the United Nations could perform, General Romulo said: "There is a challenge to which the free states of Asia can respond wholeheartedly. The goal of a free world, made secure and prosperous through joint effort on a basis of equality, is one which commands their undivided allegiance."—United Press.

MORE AID TO FIGHT TERRORISTS

London, Nov. 20.

Sir Harold Briggs, the Director of anti-bandit operations in Malaya, is likely to have talks with the Defence Minister, Mr Emanuel Shinwell, during his fortnight's stay here, it was authoritatively learned today.

Sir Harold, who is due here tomorrow from Singapore, will ask for more aid to help fight the Malayan terrorists. He will probably also discuss the situation there with other British Ministers, including the War Minister, Mr John Strachey, and the Chiefs of Staff.

Sir Harold talks with the Colonial Secretary, Mr James Griffiths—the primary purpose of his visit—will begin on Wednesday.

Sir Henry Gurney, the British High Commissioner in Malaya, will attend. No agenda has yet been fixed for the talks, which will be of an informal nature. Later discussions will depend on what Sir Harold brings reports on the latest developments in Malaya and on the exact nature of the aid he asks to intensify his anti-Communist campaign.

He will be met at London Airport tomorrow by Mr John Higham, head of the Colonial Office's South-East Asian Department.

Sir Henry Gurney returns to Singapore, on December 12.—Reuter.

Money Given Away In Secret

SHAW'S FORTUNE MAY BE £150,000

Bernard Shaw's last will, made this year, is 8,000 words long and is in the hands of the Public Trustee, who will be the sole executor.

Mr William Limb, an official of the Public Trustee Office, said: "I have read the will once. It is very detailed but will be pushed through quickly."

"Probate can be expected this month."

The Public Trustee Office is a 42-year-old Government agency for handling settlements.

A friend of Shaw said he may have left only £150,000, despite £1,000,000 earnings and a life interest in most of his wife's £150,000 estate.

Death duties cut his wife's estate; taxation and generosity cut his own.

GIFTS: He maintained a widow whose extravagant husband left her penniless and he paid for her children at Oxford. Nobody in the family knew where the money came from.

He paid for repairs to Avon St Lawrence church roof and subscribed to the church funds. He gave 18 houses in Carlisle, Eire, to the town. His house and three acres at Avebury, Wiltshire, were given to the National Trust as a literary shrine.

TAXES: For many years royalties brought Shaw £50,000 annually. But his income in the past ten years was cut to about £5,000 a year by taxes.

Shaw paid £200,000 for the printing of his books over the years. He retained copyright of his works, got them printed, and employed publishers to distribute them.

In 1949 he got £60,000 from royalties for "Caesar and Cleopatra", and another £60,000 for "Pygmalion". He got £20,000 accumulated royalties from Germany after the war.

He had £12,314, plus shares in Welwyn Garden City. When it was taken over by the Ministry of Town and Country Planning, Shaw collected £14,770 cash, plus shares in a new trust worth £23,000.

DUTIES: Of his wife's estate he said: "I had to hand over £40,000 in death duties, and practically the whole of the income will go to the tax collector."

His wife's money now passes to Eire for teaching "self-control, eloquence, deportment, and the arts of personal conduct and social intercourse." It is not known exactly how the money will be used.

Gravely observing them from a red carpet on the auditorium floor, where 2,000 representatives of the three Services and their auxiliaries were mustered in a General Salute, was the King, wearing his Legion membership badge and war service medals, accompanied by the Queen and Princess Margaret, both wearing deep mourning.

Around them were leaders of the Government, the Services and distinguished overseas visitors.

MOVING ACT

Joining them in this most moving act of remembrance was a greater audience, for millions more were afforded a glimpse of this spectacle being televised for the first time, while wireless listeners heard the graphic narrative of John Sledge, the marching of the 200 Legion bearers of standards from branches all over the country and as far afield as Trieste and Berlin, the mighty roar which greeted the Royal party, the music of the ceremonial display by the Royal Marines Band, and the cheering as Services detachments marched to their places on the platform.

Glimpses of the Service lives of the sailor, soldier and airman were the highlights of the Festival, and whoops of joy greeted the destruction of the model Zeppelin by gunners of the Royal Regiment of Artillery as it moved across the ceiling in a graphic representation of the Royal Regiment's distinguished defence of Hartlepool in December 1914, and of London in 1918.

The Royal Navy's ceremony of the colours and hornpipe display, the Halton passing-out parade of the RAF, and the Army Physical Training College display by instructors were features of a perfectly staged ceremonial.

Led by the massed bands of the Brigade of Guards and Royal Marines, the King and Queen joined their subjects in the community singing of the songs of two World Wars and later in the final Service of Remembrance conducted by the Dean of Chichester, accompanied by representatives of the Chapter and the choir of the Cathedral.

BBC ATTITUDE TO RELIGION "AN OUTRAGE"

The BBC's policy towards religion was described by the Free Church of Scotland, in a statement issued recently, as "an outrage to our Christian principles and traditions."

"It would seem," said the statement, "as if the board of directors is made up of men who have no spiritual convictions and no sense of spiritual values. They are discharging their responsibilities to the nation regardless of spiritual consequences."

"The most blatant atheism is being put over the air. It is no defence to say that the Christian point of view will also be presented. It seems a case of putting a house on fire for the pleasure of seeing the engines put it out."

CHIEF QUARREL

"In this instance there is no guarantee that it will be put out, especially by the sort of Christian apologists chosen by the BBC. Our chief quarrel with the BBC is that it treats the Christian faith as an open question and provides a forum for militant atheism on equal terms."

"What would happen if the BBC treated the laws of health or political anarchism in the fashion it treats religion? If anarchy in the political sphere cannot be discussed, why should anarchy in the spiritual sphere be given equal standing with loyalty to God? From such a sowling there can be only one harvest."

HAREWOOD TO SELL MORE LAND

The Earl of Harewood is to sell by auction next summer another 6,000 acres of the Harewood estate, mostly in the Harrogate and Wetherby areas. Between 55 and 60 tenants are affected. The acreage covers seven parishes and Plompton Rocks.

At the estate office recently it was stated that it was hoped that the amount realised would meet outstanding death duties on the estate of Lord Harewood's father, the "sixth Earl. Last June the sale of 8,000 acres realised £293,000.

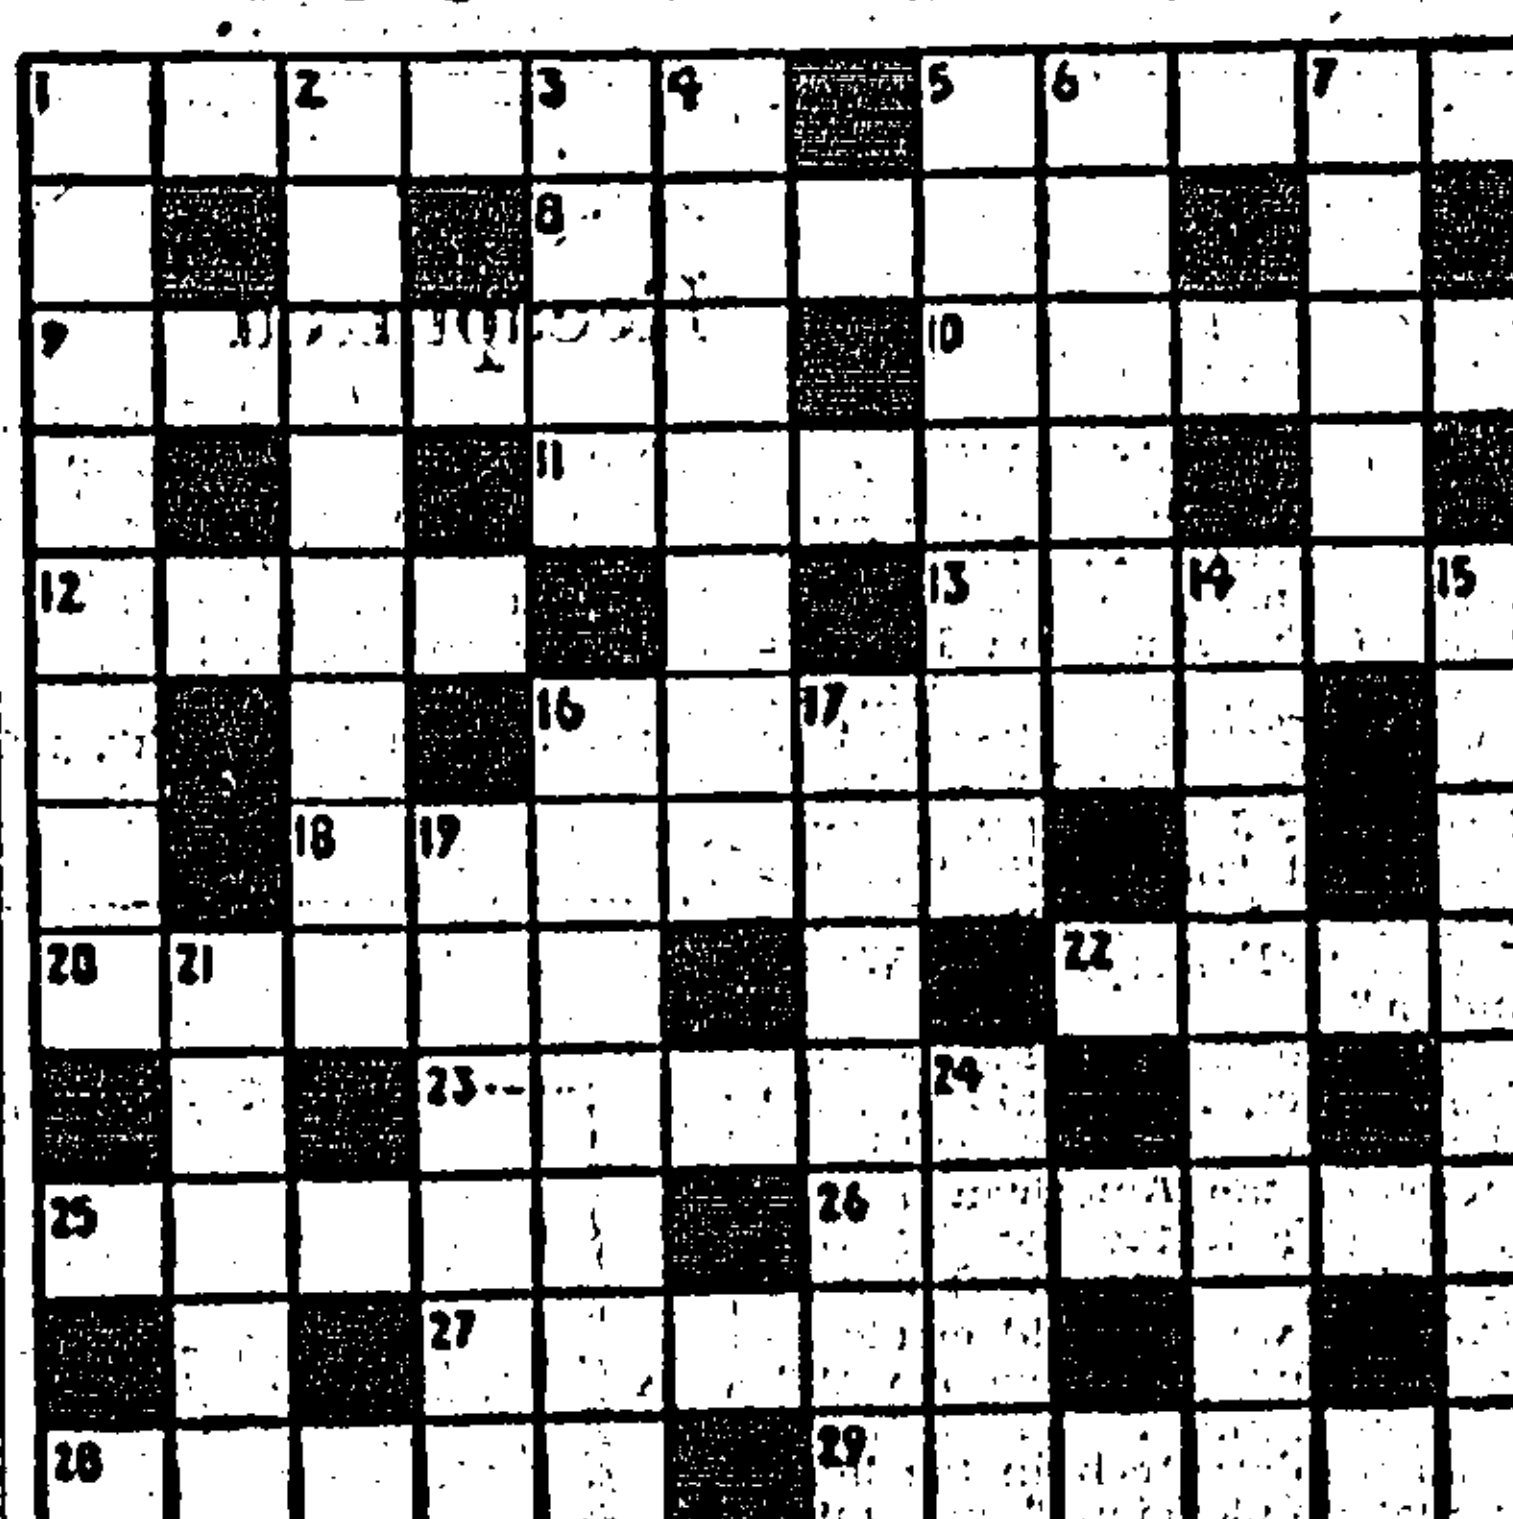

The further sale will reduce the estate to less than half of the 22,000 acres at the time of the death of the sixth Earl.

A letter from Lord Harewood received by tenants stated that the sale was "a step that I am taking with the greatest reluctance. But the amount of the death duties I have to pay leaves me with no alternative. I hope many tenants will find it possible to buy their own holdings."

END OF THE TRAIL FOR WOODCOCK

These four pictures, the top three from Central Press Photos, present as dramatic an account as any story could of the exit from the heavy-weight picture of Bruce Woodcock, 29, who lost his British and British Empire titles to Jack Gardner, 24-year-old chicken farmer from Leicester, after 11 rounds of a hopeless battle against old boxing injuries and a determined challenger.

In the top picture, early on in the fight, Woodcock finds one of his famous rights effectively blocked by Gardner.

As the fight goes on, Woodcock is still attacking. But the gash above his eye is opened and he has slowed down. Gardner is still using his feet effectively and here he ducks (bottom right) to avoid one of Bruce's rights.

Below, it is all over. Woodcock sits dejectedly in his corner as Referee Eugene Henderson signals the end of the fight. He had been jabbed into retreating at the end of the 11th round with a bleeding mouth and nose and with the cut over his left eye opened again and hammered into a pulpy mess.

MRS BECK CLAIMS

Golf Is The Ideal Sport For Women

London, Nov. 20. Mrs John Beck, recently appointed captain of the British women's golf team to South Africa during the next season, stoutly champions golf as the ideal sport for women.

Her main argument is that golf has no superior in training a woman's eye and in providing lessons in acute judgment. She takes for granted its claims as an exercise. Mrs Beck, herself a mother and a golfer, for she has two sons, and is a former Irish Women's Golf Champion. Often her keen eye and winning judgment have been one of the main attributes of her many successes in tournaments. She says that golf is the only sport which gives a woman a chance to develop her mind as well as her body.

In 1947, as partner. Niceties of judgment take on even greater importance in foursome play where a partner's consideration is added to the pitfalls of singles play. "Going out" for a shot when subsequent recovery or success is a matter for one's own contemplation becomes a totally different question when one's partner has to take part.

The same gallery of judgment has to be exercised in foursome play when, for example, a partner has a reputation for being a "club" though short in the long iron game. Those second shot "traps" have to be considered when on the green. In the opinion of Mrs Beck, a woman's golf is a game which gives her a chance to develop her mind as well as her body.

Army-Navy Match Was The Most Thrilling Of The Season

Says 'J.T. STUD'

By far the most exciting and thrilling rugby match this season was witnessed on Saturday when I thought the Army a trifle fortunate in gaining the verdict over the Navy by nine points to eight.

The sailors had the upper hand for most of the match although in the dying stages of the game the Army's superior fitness told. What a grand side the Navy team could be granted the same facilities as the Club and Army.

Their energetic and fast forwards more than held their own for the greater part of the game and what a refreshing sight it was to see a team other than the Club match the Army both in the tight and the loose.

During the first 10 minutes play swung from end to end with both sides probing each other's defences when suddenly Clayden so often the Army's match winner, finding his way blocked attempted and succeeded with a brilliant drop.

Then came the Army's turn. For a long spell the Navy forwards had the ball deep in Army territory. A quick thrust by Pines was nullified just short of the line, then, three times in rapid succession, Bence failed to convert penalty awards against the Army backrow forwards for offside and obstruction offences. Navy were still having the better of matters when half time sounded and on the play deserved to be at least on level terms. Navy continued to dominate after the interval and one could but wonder how long Kelly could keep up the good work. He was everywhere ready to back an attack and on one occasion he came very near to scoring.

HAMMERED AWAY

The Army continued to hammer away for the remaining score and minutes from no-side a penalty between the posts and line gave Clayden another opportunity. He made no mistake to give the Army victory.

Of the players, Berrwick stole the limelight with his long raking touchkicks. Kelly was head and shoulders above every other forward on view and had grand support from Thomson, Bence and Fawcett. Norman and Lemon were the best of the outsiders with Pines a decided acquisition, although he could well pay more concentration on getting the ball away.

Dr Eberle handled the game admirably.

THE MAN FROM MOSCOW

Secret police shadow that never left him

by RICHARD JONES

HE wore a short-peaked black cap, a long black overcoat, black shoes and a blue woollen muffler.

It was the blue muffler that impinged itself on my memory. Thereafter it was to become for me a symbol of the shadow that broods over all Russia, haunting the lives not only of Russians themselves but of foreigners as well.

My family and I had just moved into our new home in Moscow. It was in a modern block of flats sprouting out of the slumland of Taganka, east of the Kremlin.

NOW FACE TO FACE

WE were taking the children for a walk along the riverside on our first Saturday afternoon in the capital when the man in the blue muffler first crossed our path.

At first we did not pay much attention to him. But when we swung round gaily together we came face to face with him again.

"I've seen that man before somewhere," remarked my wife. Then, glancing back, she exclaimed: "Good gracious! He's following us."

I looked, and sure enough he was about 20 yards behind us. He followed us all the way back home.

Such was our first introduction to the "shadow" that the Russian secret police puts on special visitors to the Soviet Union.

For a whole month we were under constant surveillance.

When I left home in the morning the little man would be there to see me off. After I had gone he would walk over to the wall telephone to report.

When I arrived at the office another guard would notify police headquarters of my arrival. So it went on every time I moved.

NOTED IT

IN the evening when we went to the theatre, the blue muffler would appear again. From the Russian chauffeur who drove us he would ascertain our destination.

If we gave the driver a different order once inside the car, it was his job to notify the police of our change of plan. You could not get away from it.

Then after a month the man in the muffler vanished—or so we thought. At least he didn't make himself so obvious.

It wasn't exactly a happy introduction to a country in which we had planned to spend the next three years. Nevertheless it showed us the shape of things to come.

It was, in fact, the Russian way of serving notice on us not to go poking and probing into Russian people's lives.

Twelve roads fan out of Moscow but woe to any foreigner who attempts to travel on them beyond 30 miles.

Deviate from the main road and you will find yourself looking down a Tommy gun with two naked bayonets at your back.

RICHARD JONES.

We went to Klin to visit Tolstoy's birthplace and selected a quiet spot by the road-side to have a picnic.

We had barely sat on the grass when up popped three Red Army men, armed to the teeth. The N.C.O. gave us the Russian equivalent of "get going and make it fast!"

We had halted by the side of a forced labour camp.

These camps are situated on every road out of Moscow.

There is the usual barbed wire compound, and an elevated sentry box in which sits a Red Army man with his sub-machine gun trained on the site.

FOR 300 MILES

THERE is a particularly big camp on the Tula road which leads to Yasnaya Polyana, where Tolstoy used to live.

Maybe that is why the secret police followed me for 300 miles one Sunday when I went to pay homage to the greatest of Russian writers.

As Yasnaya Polyana is outside the limit I had first to notify the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of my intention to visit it.

Next I had to specify the means of transport, the route, the date of departure and return and the names of those going with me.

Leaving the flat, our Government hired car was first followed by a little black Fiat containing three of the secret police.

After we had passed the 30 miles limit the black car turned off and a more powerful vehicle was brought into service. This followed us until we reached our destination.

At the entrance to Tolstoy's home a uniformed policeman inquired from where we had come. He obviously had been informed beforehand.

OUR PICNIC

BEFORE making our tour of Tolstoy's estate we decided to picnic on a grassy patch near by.

Again we had barely sat down before a nondescript character approached our chauffeur, led him a little distance away and kept him talking.

I called the chauffeur back and asked him what the trouble was. He shrugged his shoulders, muttered, "Nichovo" (It's nothing) and went back to our unwitting caller.

There was a little group of Komsomols (young Communists) being photographed outside Tolstoy's house when we arrived. This I thought would make an interesting picture.

I asked the young woman in charge if she had any objection to my taking a photograph.

"Certainly not," she replied.

NO, NO, NO

TO make doubly certain I went up to the militiaman standing by and asked him if he minded. "Not at all," he answered.

I was about to press the trigger when a hand fell on my shoulder. It was the militiaman.

"It is not necessary," he remarked. "What do you mean 'not necessary'?" I queried. "A second ago you said it was all right."

He nodded his head in the direction of two men standing a little distance away. There was no need for further explanation. My shadows had caught up with me.

MY 'CRIME'

THE little group of Komsomols looked more disconcerted than I, and I still wonder how their group leader explained it away.

By now a plain-clothes policeman had joined the two men. Everywhere we went they followed. I had a camera, and that is a crime for a foreigner in the Soviet Union.

Through lovely woods we wended our way to Tolstoy's grave. I was certainly not prepared for the sight that greeted me there.

Standing easy, with arms behind their backs, were two militia-women in dark blue skirts, white tunics, blue berets, and a revolver holster at their sides.

As we edged up to the grave so the three "shadows" edged closer until one man was a yard from my left elbow, a second man a yard from my right, and their female companion stood right in front of me on the other side of the grave.

DEVIATING

IN such circumstances even a resolute foreigner does not dare to lift his camera.

It would most certainly have been an excuse to confiscate camera and film, and all sorts of complications would have ensued.

Instead of completing the organised tour we made our way quickly back to the car.

The guards had expected us to follow the customary visitors' routine and when they discovered that we had deviated from the recognized path came racing after us. Not a word was said the whole time.

Disillusioned and a little shocked, we settled ourselves in our car and told the driver to get us back to Moscow as quickly as he could.

The shadows dropped the lady, but not us. Nor did they let us out of their sight.

ON OUR TAIL

HALF-WAY we had a puncture. Our pursuers shot past us, laughing at our plight. That must be the end of them, we thought.

But they were waiting in a side turning for us to reappear, and thereafter they kept closely on our tail until we were one hundred yards from home.

Nevertheless we were to get the laugh on them one day later.

Yaroslavl is a picturesque old town on the Volga, more noted for its dreamy churches and monasteries than its new industrial enterprises, though the Russians think otherwise.

They always suspect the foreign visitor to be more interested in the latter; and take such special steps to restrict your movements in the town.

We decided to have a row on the Volga. The man at the boat-house hired us a dinghy and soon we were pulling away as cheerfully as the numerous Russians on the water.

Suddenly a man came running along the bank calling us to come in. We pretended not to hear.

CLOSED UP

A FEW minutes later the man who had hired us the boat could be seen pulling furiously towards us, and panting, came alongside.

"The station is closed for the day," he explained. "You must come in at once."

"But what about all those other people on the river?" we asked. "They've got to come in, too," he said.

We rowed back, the boat-house manager generously offering us our money back.

But we declined his offer, preferring instead to stand by and enjoy the fierce remonstrances being made by the rest of the boating enthusiasts.

"The river is calm, the weather is good, why close the station so suddenly?" asked one disgruntled Russian.

"It is an order," replied the manager. The man did not query the order. One learns not to, in Russia.

How to be ONE UP on your friends

FIRST AND FOR THE FUTURE

WHILE wars, cold or otherwise, occupy the headlines, we must not allow our attention to be wholly diverted from the war of nerves we are all of us engaged in with our friends.

It is a great importance in the social relationship to be One Up whenever possible, "to make the other man feel that something has gone wrong, however slightly": and all serious social combatants owe a debt of gratitude to Mr Stephen Potter, who has now extended his researches from the psychology of game (the Art of Winning Games Without Actually Cheating) to cover the no less tricky field of contemporary life.

His new work, which in feeling lies somewhere between a games instruction book, a New Thought pamphlet and a first-aid manual provides the reader with reliable gambits for mastering any given situation. It contains not only valuable hints on deflating the confidence of others but also techniques for countering deflation, cutting the ground from under the other man's feet and puncturing the expert.

OUT OF DEPTH?

DO you feel out of your depth in musical conversations?

Does religious talk make you uneasy?

Do all your friends seem to know more about everything than you do?

In all these familiar situations, and in many more, S. Potter is your man.

He is particularly strong on conversational ripostes, and offers several gambits for silencing opponents.

Most useful of these, perhaps, is "languaging up," a process by which the adept is able "to confuse, irritate and depress by the use of foreign words, fictitious or otherwise, either singly or in groups."

This technique, however, has the disadvantage of requiring a little knowledge, and beginners had better stick to O.K.-words, which are almost as effective.

O.K.-words (e.g., mystique, classique, dialectic, canonicus) can be used with good results "because no one quite understands what they mean, albeit these words have been in use for a sufficiently long time, at any rate by Highbrowmen, say ten years, for your audience to have seen them once or twice and already felt uneasy about them."

PUNCTURES

I AM perhaps surprised (and I Mr Potter would fully approve of my surprise since it follows a recommended gambit for critics, namely Friendly Attack) I am surprised, I repeat, to find no mention in this otherwise comprehensive manual of the social techniques for puncturing the Self-Esteem of Authors.

Minor authors, for instance, can be paralyzsed instantaneously by the kindly question, "Do you still keep up your writing? If they are rather too eminent for this gambit, much can be done with a hearty and straightforward "I'm afraid I've never read any of your books," and pursuing your good-natured enquiries as though it were extremely difficult, if not impossible, to obtain any of them.

Excellent effect was obtained some time ago by a gentleman at a party who asked Dorothy Sayers three times what her name was, then shook his head and said sympathetically, "Never heard of it!"

Similar ploys can be tried with success on almost any celebrity, if you have the nerve. The finest example I ever heard was at my own table, when a charming American turned in the middle of dinner to Bertrand Russell (to whom she had, up to this point presented only a shoulder) and said encouragingly, "You've got an amusing face: what do you do?"

Not having been trained in Potter's counter play, Russell was visibly rocked, and the American remained in a state of unchallenged One Upness for the rest of the evening.

PHONE RULES

HAVING gratefully studied Potter's rules for Telephone Management (absolutely essential in Important Person Play), I looked in vain for a section of Spectacle Handling. Potter's ruling on this indispensable piece of business would be invaluable to all commitment and public speakers.

I have seen entire committees brought to heel by O. Sitwell's mastery of use of Spectacle Play. O. Sitwell, of course, uses a particularly small case and double-hinged frames, which enormously multiply the variety of operations which can be performed while speaking. It is a branch of chairmanship requiring further study.

GOLFERS, TOO

POTTER'S book is valuable because he is minute observer and a sound psychologist. (See his practical grasp of the music situation: "The general aim in music is to make other people feel outside it.")

He has shrewd advice for actors, dons, week-end guests, party-goers (Life and Soulman-ship) and, of course, golfers. With the guide to behaviour the attentive reader will be able to dominate his entire circle, and become a hated success in any society.

MISS MAYO YEARNS TO BE A HOUSEWIFE

Burbank, Calif.
To be nothing more, for a time, than just a homely housewife is the prime ambition of gorgeous screen actress, Virginia Mayo.

She wants to stay home, and relax, and be thrilled by answering the doorbell; running the vacuum cleaner and admiring her new deep-freeze.

"I can't think of anything nicer than answering the doorbell," said the blonde actress who looks as though she were too beautiful to do anything so mundane as open the door.

Pots & Pans For Her

She recently concluded "The Flame and the Arrow," and "Captain Horatio Hornblower," both in Technicolor, and at present, she is dancing her pretty legs off as James Cagney's leading lady in "The West Point Story" at Warner Bros. When that spirited assignment is over, it's the pots and pans for her.

"Well, not exactly the pots and pans," she said, "because I'm a home-girl without many culinary pretensions. I'd rather just push the vacuum around the living room and arrange flowers and be a housewife for a change."

Although she has been married several years, she has never had a chance to be a housewife. "I've always been busy running to the studio to act. Poor Mike (Michael O'Shea) doesn't even know he has a wife sometimes."

Although she has always lived an active life, Virginia figures that she has a nice strong streak of relaxation which heretofore she has been unable to indulge.

Don't Know Her

"People tell me that I'll never be able to stand idleness for more than a couple of weeks. I laugh at them. 'You just don't know me,' I say. Give me a chance, and I'll prove it."

A lot of her fans will probably groan that it will be a terrible waste of talent and beauty to hide it under a dingy apron and a dust cap for even a few weeks. But when Virginia Mayo makes up her mind, it's likely to stay made up.

So there's going to be a lot of doorbell-analyzing at a certain cottage on Magnolia Blvd.

Mr. Punch Made a Snow Man

—He Could Move Around Like a Person—

By MAX TRELL

"MR. PUNCH," said Hanid, the shadow-girl with the turned-about name, to her old friend who was half-dozing in the chair by the fireplace, "did you ever make a snow man?"

Mr. Punch opened his eyes. "Yes, I once made a snow man. He was a wonderful fellow. We used to go everywhere together. His name was George."

Hanid said: "You went everywhere together, Mr. Punch? How could you go everywhere with a snow man? A snow man doesn't even move!"

"George did," said Mr. Punch. "George moved around as easily as you or I. He was made of snow. But he was a man. He had no trouble moving. At least," Mr. Punch added, "he didn't seem to have any trouble moving."

Mr. Punch stopped to light his pipe. Then he continued.

Snowed During Night
"I remember the day I made George. It had snowed all during the night and in the morning there was a high drift of snow piled up right in front of our door. My mother gave me a shovel and asked me to clear the snow away from the door and to make a path down to the roadway. So out I went, for young as I was I always obeyed my mother, no matter what she asked me to do."

"Well, I got our door cleared and had made a path through the snow down to the roadway. It was still several hours before breakfast (I didn't usually eat breakfast until after I had my lunch), so I decided that I would make a snow man with the snow that I had just shoveled up. It hardly took any time at all. A pile of snow for his head, a pile of snow for his legs and two more piles of snow for his arms. And there stood George, round and fat and jolly. I made his eyes out of buttons, stuck a pipe in his mouth, gave him one of my father's old hats to keep on his head, and finally I cut him a fine stout cane out of an old oak branch."

"George didn't say a word to me all that day," Mr. Punch explained to Hanid. "But I knew mine because no matter how often I looked at him, he would always smile back to me, which is exactly the right way for a friend to act. But that night, after I had gone to bed, and my room was dark, and I was snuggled under my blankets, and (I guess) had already fallen asleep, I felt George creeping into bed with me."

"What?" exclaimed Hanid in astonishment. "George the snow man crept into bed with you!"

Punch's snow man.

How do you know that, Mr. Punch?

"I couldn't see him in the dark," replied Mr. Punch, "but I distinctly knew he was sleeping at the foot of my bed because my feet suddenly felt ice cold!"

"But," Hanid started to say, "maybe they felt ice cold because the window was open and your feet were sticking out of the blanket, and—"

Didn't Mind
"My dear," said Mr. Punch, "it was George all right. He had his back against my feet. I know a snow man when I feel one! But I didn't really mind. How would you feel if you were a snow man and had to stand out in the open all night long? George was just being very friendly. He used to come into my bed almost every night, all winter long. And he used to go with me when I went down the road to the store on an errand for my mother. He was very frisky. He would make sure that I couldn't see him. Then he would tip-toe behind me and put his hands on my ears. They would instantly turn ice cold. Then he would wait until I was looking the other way and pinch the tip of my nose, which would also instantly turn ice cold. Yes, George used to go with me wherever I went, touching my ears, my nose and my toes. Sometimes, too, he would blow against my legs, or shake the snow off a tree just as I was walking under it. Sometimes he would skate behind me when I went ice skating on the frozen pond, and push me along as fast as the wind. Oh, we were wonderful friends all right. There was only one place where he wouldn't go with me."

"Where was that, Mr. Punch?" Hanid asked.

"He wouldn't go with me when I went to warm up by the fire! But you couldn't blame him for that. After all, he was a snow man. He'd just melt!"

While Rupert waits he hears footsteps and voices approaching, and, crouching down out of sight, he can see the heavy feet of the women as they stride past him. from his pal, and no sound except the quiet talk from the man. He strains his ears but cannot catch any of the words. Those must have been the bandits," mutters Rupert. "I wonder if Bingo had the sense to dodge into the back of the cave and hide. If so he may yet escape them."

New Way Found to Administer Hormones, Glandular Extracts

By H. N. DUNDESEN, M.D.

It is always the aim of the doctor to make every treatment as painless and as simple as possible. Sometimes, a slight change in the method of giving a medicine will make necessary treatments not only less troublesome but also less expensive for the patient.

This is certainly true in the treatment of certain disorders which require the administration of hormones or glandular extracts over a long period of time. Many women who suffer severe discomforts during the change of life know the value of hormones, but they often object to the method of giving them in repeated injections.

To meet this objection, another way of giving hormones has been devised which not only frees the patient from the needle but has distinct medical advantages.

This method consists of implanting or putting under the skin a hard, compressed tablet of the desired glandular extract. In this form it is absorbed far more slowly than when given by injection. Quantities of the extract absorbed by the blood are minute, but the process goes on without interruption and more nearly duplicates what normally goes on in the body where ordinarily small amounts of hormones are continuously fed into the blood stream.

SMALL INCISION

Not only does this method eliminate the inconvenience of frequent injections, but apparently it is more economical. Good results may be obtained for a period of six months or longer by just one implantation of the pellets.

In implanting the pellets, a local anesthetic is given into the skin of the abdomen and a small incision made. Then a special instrument which injects the pellets is inserted into this opening and the pellets are injected under the skin. Following the injection, the instrument is withdrawn and a dry dressing put over the wound.

This type of procedure seems to be especially useful in patients with severe symptoms due to the change of life, in whom repeated injections of the glandular extracts may be necessary.

It has also been used in young women with infantile development of the womb or breast, or in women who have painful periods associated with underdevelopment of the womb.

Medical Quiz: What is meant by a "virus infection"? Is it contagious? Can it be cured?

Answer: There are a large number of conditions which seem to be produced by a virus, such as virus pneumonia, colds, influenza, chickenpox, and measles, as well as many others.

Most virus infections seem to be contagious. Whether or not they can be cured depends upon the type.

Asked To Lecture On Ballet

Ten years ago ballet fans were a comparatively small and select group. Today an enormous number of people flock to see their favourite ballerinas dance. The success of the Sadler's Wells Ballet Company, now touring the U.S.A. and Canada, has so aroused the interest of many people in the art of ballet that Miss Ninette de Valois, Director of the Company, has been asked to lecture on it in Canada.

Play Up Your Eyes

By HELEN FOLLETT

IZING up the feminine countenance, even the least observant among us must realize that the eyes are the most interesting and expressive feature. When the lovesick swain gazes at his adored one he may admire the gardenia-and-rose complexion, the tendrils of her hair, the neat lines of her figure, but it is the pair of twinkling eyes that catches and claims him.

Watch what your eyes say, and let their messages be friendly. Take good care of them, treat them with respect. It is a shame to abuse these wonderful sight machines, as some women do. They read or sew in a dim light. They pore the day long over fiction and glasses no matter how tired and weary the soul-eyes may be. It's plain gray. There is no beauty appeal when the eyes are dull or when the lids are red and smarting.

Firm and Strong

It is important, too, to keep the eyes around the eyes should be kept firm and strong so that early wrinkles will not settle there. Light massage with a cream will do wonders to save off little wrinkles that are so hateful. Get a heavy emollient it every night of your life. While at it, give your face and neck a gentle lubricating, tapping the cream into the flesh, slapping and spanking, brisking up the circulatory streams so that the skin will have pleasing colour. And don't fail to use a little mascara to bring out the real beauty of your eyes.

Good Effect

Twice a day the eyes should be bathed with warm water then with cold to bring sparkle and light to them. This practice will have a favourable effect upon the eyelashes. If the growth is thin, the little wingers short and stubby, touch the edges of the eyelids with mineral oil. This is a safe treatment because, if the oil gets into the eyes, it will do no harm.

Getting back to the question of glasses the very day you have difficulty in reading, make up your mind that you will seek professional help. The idea that eyes make a woman look older doesn't hold good these days.

A little mascara does wonders to bring out the real beauty of your eyes. But don't forget they need good care, too, and don't brand abuse.

fabrics together, seams to outside. Use paper clips to hold to position.

Stitch 1/4" from outside edge all around. Carefully pull right side out through neck opening. Smooth flat. Press outside edge on gabardine side, using a press cloth and moderately warm iron.

Centro Front Opening

Cut centre front opening down from F to H 2/3 neck measurement. Turn raw edges in. Begin at point I and taper the turn in up to 1/4" at neck. Clip neckline every 1/2" making clips 1/4" deep.

Use pieces J for a double collar band. Cut a 2 1/4" strip on true crosswise grain. Stitch one edge to right side of neckline with a 3/4" seam. Whip other edge down on wrong side.

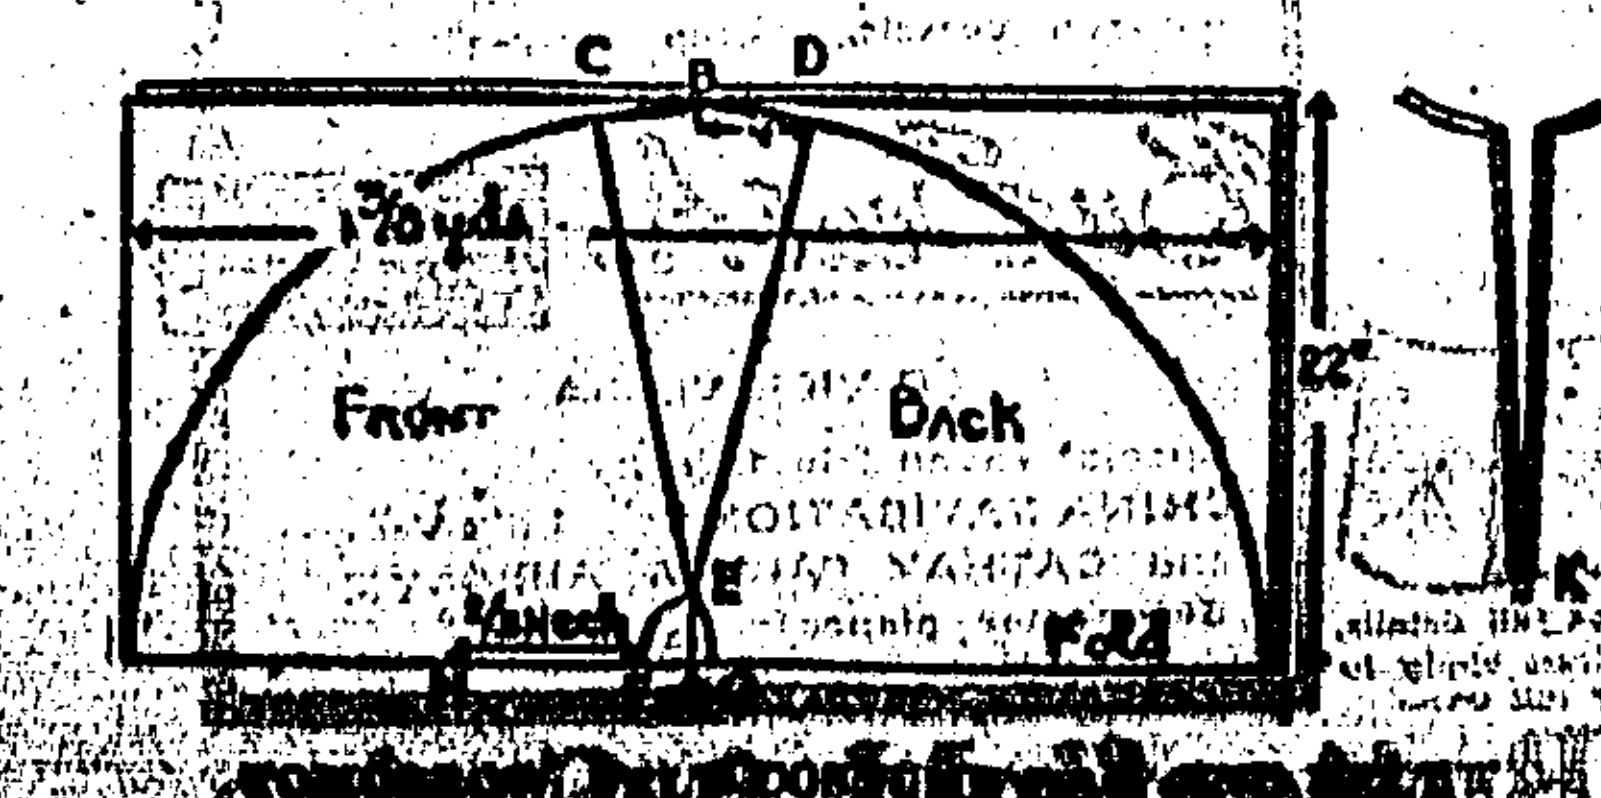

Top-stitch 3/4" in from edge all way around the wrap. Work 4 buttonholes or have them made at your sewing centre.

Two Fabric Strips

Prepare 2 strips of fabric, each 1/4" wide finished and long enough to extend from centre of buttonhole one side to centre of one on opposite side.

Sew buttons to each end of each strip. Tack these to place on right-hand side so they will not be lost.

Measure dots from shoulder seam, each side about 7" and tack edges of cape together to form sleeves. Do this with a bar-tack, so that when wrap is worn plastic side out in the rain, the appearance will be equally as nice on plastic side as on gabardine side.

She brought with her a little round hat for watching tiddleywinks.

I HOPE to read something like that soon, now that there is an off-the-shoulder dress for watching rowing. It must be well-nigh impossible to watch rowing in an on-the-shoulder dress, but I forget why.

For watching ping-pong there are the new green thigh-boots with formal tassels. But at my age I can afford to be seen in my old off-the-face, felt hat pretty well anywhere.

Was it Foul enough?

DR SMART-ALLICK is now ready to admit to the Governors of Narkover that there are advantages in having an ugly matron who does not cheat much at cards. Meanwhile, the suspicion that the innocuous M. Gallop was Captain Foul-enough is growing. "Nobody else," said the Headmaster, "could have taught that girl such tricks." Informed by the Governors that "the whole scandalous affair has left a nasty taste in the mouth," Smart-Allick retorted: "That's nothing to the nasty taste it has left in my banking account." Foul-enough, interviewed yesterday, said: "These things will occur at public schools. Anyhow, it was time someone soaked that eminent D. Litt."

In passing

THE imprisoning of several men in Lisbon for taking off too many garments in a heat-wave reminded me of something I once overheard in an Irish town. A tiny boy came along the pavement in a bathing-dress. Two elderly women watched him. When he had gone by one said to the other: "They're all naked in this place." Said the second

YOUR BIRTHDAY ... By STELLA

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21

IF you are born today, you have a deep and studious mind which is not satisfied with superficialities. You must always get to the basic facts of everything and analyse them thoroughly. You have a critical sense which could be put to good use in literature, art, music or the sciences. Better this, than to let it disintegrate into a habit of fault finding. You of the fair sex must be especially warned against this.

Rather close in money matters, you could learn to be a little more open handed. Capital is increased by putting it to work, not by hoarding it! You are fond of travel and like activity and variety in your life. You are not one to fit happily into monotonous routine—you are too ingenious and inventive. A conventional method or a traditional attitude is something you usually try to avoid.

You have a robust constitution and enjoy the good things of this world. You may have a tendency to be over-weight unless you are careful. Diet and get plenty of exercise. Since you have a sensitive nature, yourself, you're inclined to be careful of the feelings of others. Your criticism is usually constructive and kindly. Those who heed it will profit from it. Your marriage should be a happy and harmonious one.

To find what the stars have in store for tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 22

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)—Steer clear of anything controversial. Best for you to be the mediator if you can.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—Exert care in handling all electrical equipment. Be on the alert to ward off accident this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—An excellent day for all types of merchandising. Plan for some romance when evening comes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—A day when speed and efficiency count. Procrastination is an ill-advised policy just now.

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 21)—Your friends and co-workers may co-operate with you beyond your anticipations. Accept their help.

ARIES (Mar. 22-Apr. 20)—Keep your mind active and your hands busy. There is plenty to be done if you look around for it.

TAURUS (Apr. 21-May 21)—Be of assistance to some elderly relative. This is definitely not your day for romance!

GEMINI (May 22-June 22)—Keep a keen eye out for good values if you are shopping. Bargains are to be had just now.

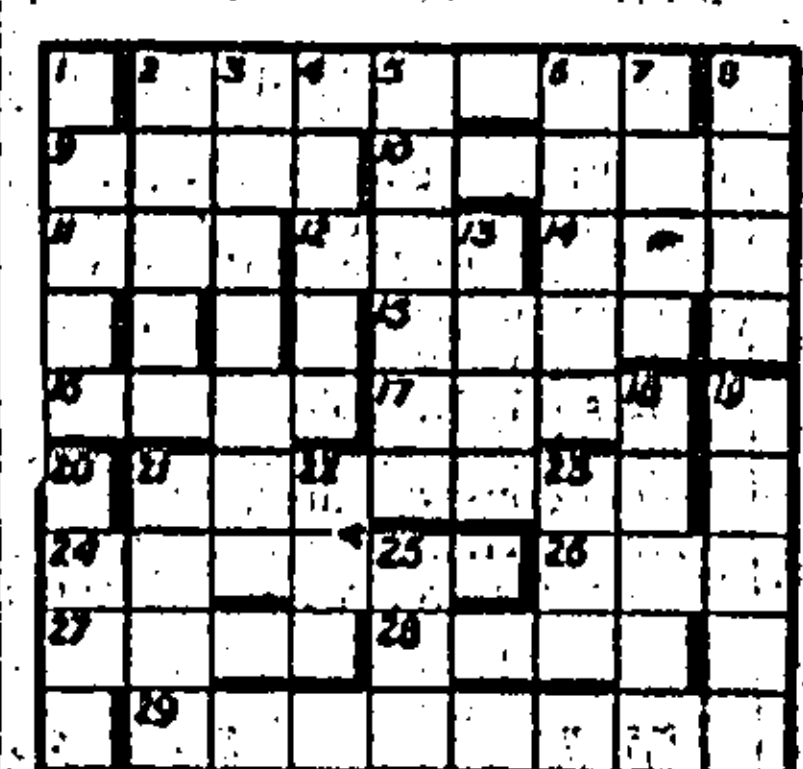

CANCER (June 23-July 23)—No matter what happens, remain calm. Getting excited can only augment any crisis.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23)—Some new objective may need your undivided attention. Put everything you have into completing it.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 22)—A gift can brighten the day of some elderly relative. Pay a visit and cheer up your friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)—Make this day count for a great deal. Efficient management will work wonders for you.

Opening lead—4 ♣

By OSWALD JACOBY

"SNT that awful," moaned Hard Luck Joe. "The only time all evening I have held a decent hand and then my good cards were the ruin of me!"

"Don't complain about your cards," said West morosely. "All you can really hope for is so many high cards that you can afford to drop tricks right and left. The way you mistreated your high cards this time was really cruel."

West had opened the queen of spades. Hard Luck Joe, playing the East hand, began an encouraging signal with the nine of spades.

Generous George, playing the South hand, looked the situation over carefully and played a low spade!

West continued spades, and this time Generous George took his ace. He ruffed a spade in dummy, cashed the ace of hearts, and ruffed a heart in his own hand. With the major suits thus stripped from the dummy and from his own hand, George was ready to lead trumps.

Hard Luck Joe was obliged to win with his black ace of trumps. At this point there was nothing he could do to stave off disaster. If he led a diamond, dummy would get a free finesse. If he led either major suit, dummy could ruff while George discarded his only diamond loser.

As usual, Joe was quite wrong to complain about the cards since he had brought misfortune on himself.

Do you see how? Decide for yourself before reading on.

Joe's mistake occurred at the very first trick. Instead of merely encouraging his partner to continue spades, Joe should have overtaken with the king of spades!

If Generous George, allowed Joe to hold this trick, he could cash his ace of clubs before exiting with a spade or a heart. He could then sit back and wait for a diamond trick.

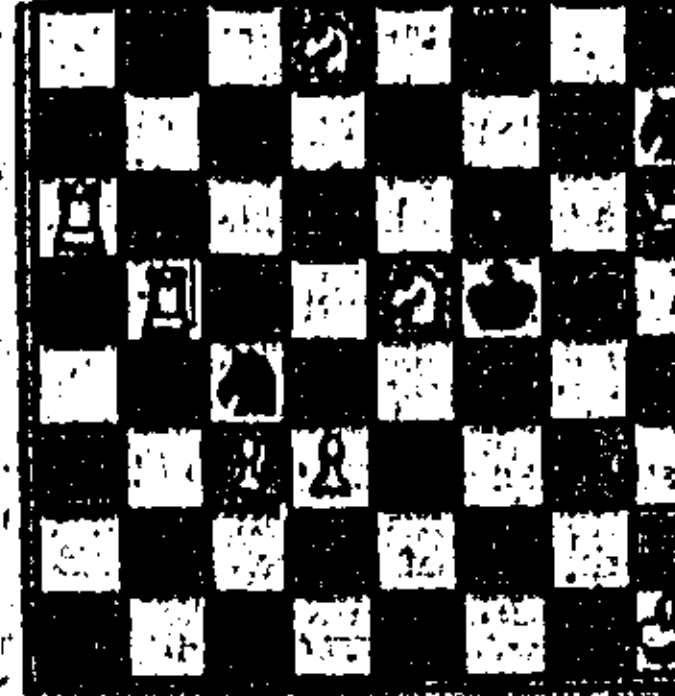

If George won the first trick, he could not strip out spades. He might take the ace of spades at the first trick, cash the ace of hearts, and ruff a heart before leading another spade.

However, Joe could take the jack of spades, cash the ace of clubs and get out safely with a third round of spades.

Prices Waver On New York Stock Market

New York, Nov. 20.

Stock prices wavered indecisively between the gain and loss columns today.

A handful of key issues tacked on small gains at the opening, and held this advantage through the session. Numerous others, however, kept seeing all day.

Trading was active, with shares changing hands at the rate of about 2,300,000 shares for the full session.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM

London, Nov. 20.

The stock market closed mostly firm today after limited activity.

British government bonds were up as much as a quarter, and many industrial shares also advanced.

Oil, tin, copper and mining shares generally weakened.

Dealing resumed in the shares of the Matador Land and Cattle Company, which operates a large ranch in the Texas Panhandle. The par five shillings shares which had been climbing steadily until dealings were halted last week at the request of the company head, Mr. W.D. MacDougall, spurted another 30 shillings and ninepence, closing at 158 9/16.

Reports that oil has been discovered near the Matador ranch were credited with causing the rush for shares.

Mr. MacDougall asked the stock exchange not to reopen trading in the shares until Thursday, but brokers declined to agree.

Grain Prices Set-Back

Chicago, Nov. 20.

Grains faltered toward the close on the Board of Trade today after starting out with much vigor.

Late selling hit all cereals, although wheat and soy beans were most affected. They both sank below Saturday's final quotations. In the case of soy beans this represented a substantial drop from the morning prices, when all deliveries made new seasonal highs.

Corn and Oats, elided by prospects of increased feeding in the Midwest as a result of cold weather, held up better than other cereals.

Prison For A Chinese Smart Alec

Ruse To Steal Pen And Watch

Using the name of Rediffusion, 19-year-old Lau Wai-kwok, who was described by the prosecution as a "Smart Alec," stole a wrist watch and an expensive fountain pen from 28 Pratt Avenue on November 7.

According to Insp. Orem at Kowloon this morning, the defendant went to the house of Li Chung-yat, claiming to have been sent there by the Rediffusion. He said that the company, having recently lost a case in Court to the Government, were going to refund the $25 instalment fees to the subscribers. He waited in the house apparently for the arrival of the company's employee with the refund money. After a while he left without being noticed and later Li found he had lost his watch and pen which had been placed on the table.

The defendant was arrested last Sunday when Li met him at the Ming Yuen Amusement Park. The following day the Police recovered the stolen property from a pawn shop.

The watch and pen were worth $370 and the defendant had pawned them for $180.

Insp. Orem disclosed that the defendant had previous convictions for theft and obtaining money by false pretences and was expelled in 1949. Mr. d'Almeida sentenced the defendant to a total term of 10 and half months and recommended him for banishment.

Unlawfully Used Motor

For being under way equipped with mechanical means of propulsion and without a certified engineer, Lee On-wah, master of trading-boat No. 6284A, was fined $150 by Mr. T.B. Low at the Marine Court this morning.

According to the Prosecution, defendant's junk was sighted by a Marine Police launch cruising north of Tung Ku at 12.10 a.m. this morning. When defendant saw the Police launch approaching her, he hoisted the sail. Shortly afterwards, the junk was overtaken and the Police on boarding saw an outboard motor. The engine was still warm. There were also four gallons of petrol on deck. Pleading guilty, defendant said that he borrowed the outboard motor from a friend on trial and it proved to be satisfactory, he had intended to apply for a licence.

SIX YEARS GAOL FOR ROBBER

Wong Chi-choi, a 21-year-old unemployed, was sent to gaol for six years by Mr Justice Scholes in the Supreme Court this morning and ordered to receive 12 strokes of the cane. Wong had been unanimously found guilty by a six man one woman jury of robbery with aggravation.

It was said that he with others not in custody had robbed Cheung Kwok-chan, a fish dealer, of a wallet containing $3,200 on July 7.

Mr Blair-Kerr, Crown Counsel, prosecuting said the complainant was on his way to the fish market early on the morning of July 7 when in Hennessy Road he was grabbed from behind by three men.

The men stole a wallet from his pocket and then made off. Complainant gave chase but lost the men in the darkness.

A Police officer who was on duty nearby saw the accused acting suspiciously and made after him and arrested him. In the course of chasing him the accused dropped a wallet. This wallet was subsequently identified by the complainant as being the one stolen from him.

More Than One Person Can Have Possession Of Gun Argues Counsel

More than one person can have possession of a revolver argued Mr M. Heenan, Crown Counsel, this morning when he prosecuted a 33-year-old Northern Chinese, Chiang Yiu-chi, seaman, before the Senior Puisne Judge, Mr Justice Gould in the Criminal Sessions. Chiang was charged with unlawful possession of a .38 revolver and 20 rounds of ammunition on September 22 last.

Did Not Keep Proper Books

MERCHANT FINED

Charged with having failed to keep books to the satisfaction of the Director of Commerce and Industry contrary to the Dutiable Commodities Ordinance, Au Cheuk, 36-year old merchant, of 65 Wing Lok Street was fined $300 or two months by Mr Hin-shing Lo at Central Court yesterday.

His wife, Lam Hing, 32, charged with possession of dutiable goods seized at 63 Wing Lok Street, was fined $1,000 or five months.

GIVES ASSURANCE

In his wife's care at the couple's residence at No. 63 Wing Lok Street, 4,269 pieces of dutiable goods had been found, mostly Chinese medicines, on which the duty payable was $976.97.

Mr Leung for defendant said his client pleaded guilty to the offence but assured the department that he would in future employ an accountant to keep the necessary books. He asked for leniency as this was a first offence. The wife also pleaded guilty but in mitigation it must be said that she was only storing the goods for her husband temporarily. The goods had actually been bought with receipts from reliable firms but the books had been badly kept and the receipts could not be traced. As soon as the accounts were properly kept there would be no further trouble.

"Your husband is a merchant," said the Magistrate, addressing Lam Hing. "And you must add the duty to your selling price on such commodities. If you had tried to sell them without so doing I would have fined you $9,000 without hesitation." The goods were ordered to be confiscated unless duty amounting to $976.97 was paid within a week.

This Afternoon's Presentations

At the end of this afternoon's meeting of the Urban Council, presentation of life saving certificates and medals will be made to qualified members of the Urban Council staff.

HAD NO PORT LIGHT

A fine of $20 was imposed on Leung Kam, master of motor-boat Lee Sang, by Mr T. B. Low at the Marine Court this morning.

According to the Prosecution, defendant's boat was seen approaching Buoy 29 without a red light on her port side at 6.45 a.m. on November 16. She was later intercepted by the Marine Police Launch.

Defendant, pleading guilty, said that the light was blown off. He was relighting the lamp when arrested by the Marine Police.

Imposing the fine, Mr Low told defendant he must be more careful in future as it was extremely dangerous to go without lights in the harbour.

Chan Mui, a Chinese woman aged 20, was fined $100 or 14 days by Mr Hin-shing Lo at Central Court yesterday for having in her possession 2,840 Macau cigarettes. The goods were ordered confiscated.

A Jury of four men and three women was empanelled. Accused was not legally represented.

The Prosecutor said that on the evening of October 3 last a Police party went to an address in Hill Road and found a Chinese holding a revolver in his hand. The man took the Police to the rear of the premises where a tin, containing 20 rounds of .38 calibre ammunition, was found. The Prosecutor said they were not now concerned with this man in the trial.

Shortly afterwards the man took the Police to another address where the present accused was arrested. In answer to a charge of possession, accused made a statement to the Police. Mr Heenan told the Jury that at this stage of the proceedings he would not reveal the contents because they would not be available to them until the statement had been admitted in evidence by his Lordship.

LAW ON POSSESSION

Explaining the law on possession, the Prosecutor said that it was possible for two people to have joint possession of a firearm at the same time. One person, he said, could have physical possession of a firearm and a second person who could have possession would be one who knew that the first person carried it on him and he had the ability, if he so wished, to take it from his pocket.

It was also possible for two or more people to have possession of a firearm at different times, Mr Heenan said. Illustrating, the Prosecutor said that "A" could have physical possession of a revolver on, say, August 1. He could divert possession of the weapon on, say, August 10, by giving it to "B" and abandoning any intention he might have to exercise control over it. "B" then would come into possession of the same firearm 10 days later.

"From that you will appreciate that two or more people could have possession of the same firearm at different times," said the Prosecutor. And that, he added, was the Crown's case here: that the accused had possession of a revolver on September 22 and that at a subsequent date he diverted himself of that possession. The fact of the case was that prior

He Offered PC A Bribe

For riding a bicycle without front light at 5.40 a.m. on November 15, Cheng Chiu was cautioned by Mr Hin-shing Lo at Kowloon this morning. For offering a bribe of $2 to the Policeman who arrested him, he was fined $150 or eight weeks.

The constable, Fuk Ping-kin, was commended by Mr d'Almeida, and the bribe money was forfeited to the Police welfare fund.

Life In Tsingtao And Tientsin Is Pretty Grim These Days

Life and business are so dead in Tsingtao that you can hear a fly drone in a restaurant said a new arrival in Hongkong this week from that city.

Although there are no parades or anti-American demonstrations, the people in Tientsin and Tsingtao are living a life of austerity. They walk along the streets poorly dressed and always with their heads bowed.

Only one taxi cab is in operation in the whole of Tsingtao and the driver raises his fare according to his fancy, the informant said. Transportation by train and pedicabs are the usual means for long distances.

Except for crew members of ships, no passengers are allowed on shore. These passengers have to be handed to the Communists for safekeeping and new ones issued each time a visit is made.

No goods are allowed to be taken on board unless a receipt can be produced.

Except for luxuries and imported goods, living in these cities is cheap. But restaurants, cafes and top-houses are empty for most of the time. Shops, too, are apparently empty, but most are able to produce any commodity when the customer can afford to pay. Goods are invariably slipped under the counter to be smuggled to Hongkong and other parts.

Movements of new arrivals to Tientsin are fully known to the Communists as pedicab drivers, shopkeepers and owners of restaurants make frequent reports about their clients.

In the line of entertainment, the Communists seem to impose no restrictions. Theaters, which are usually empty, show only Russian and Chinese pictures, and dance halls are not allowed.

Except for a few Russians who mix freely with the people, the foreign population is very small. Most are refugees and are waiting for transportation to take them to Hongkong.

Trains arriving from Shanghai are always packed and accommodation in hotels and boarding houses is not easy to find. Tickets for boats coming to Hongkong are booked weeks in advance.

The informant believes that greater restrictions are imposed on the population of Tientsin than Tsingtao. Searches made before leaving or boarding a vessel are more vigorous in Tientsin and any female wishing to go on shore is advised to inform the guard on the pier two hours before her departure so that a female searcher can be at hand.

Questions of all sorts are put by the Communists and any parcels or gifts are opened and examined before being allowed ashore.

Sequel To Gun Battle

The gun-battle between two police constables and a gunman at Kowloon Tong following an armed robbery at Cumberland Road on the evening of November 6 had a sequel before Mr Winter at Kowloon this morning when a 23-year-old unemployed man, Lau Chuen, faced a charge of armed robbery. Lau, who was alleged to have robbed Mok Cheung-hing and Tam Cheung, of a gold ring, two wrist watches and a package of air mail letters, was remanded three days for further inquiries.

During the battle PO 4734 Si Wai-kwai and one suspect were critically wounded, and they are still in Kowloon Hospital.

Discharged & Bound Over

Wong Wing-keung of 168 Tung Lo Wan Road, ground floor, rear building, was discharged by Mr Hin-shing Lo when he appeared at Central Court today charged with attempting to pick the pocket of a passenger waiting at a tram-stop.

Wong was arrested by DPC 1009 who said that he had observed defendant open the hip pocket button of a Chinese waiting to board the tram. He then arrested him.

Defendant denied this and said that he was waiting to cross the road. He was ordered to be bound over in the sum of $500 for one year.

Charge Withdrawn

A charge against Wong Yau-yau of stealing a quantity of lighter flints and saccharine from the Royal Naval Dockyard was withdrawn by the Police when defendant appeared before Mr Hin-shing Lo at Central this morning. The date of the alleged offence was March 24, 1948. Mr J. C. Stewart appeared for Wong.
